

Vagina Warriors

V-Day's 2006 theme is "Vagina Warriors: The New Revolution," celebrating new activists and leaders who are working to end violence against women in their communities. Vagina Warriors are the women and men who have often experienced violence personally or witnessed it within their communities and dedicated themselves toward ending such violence through effective, grass-roots means.

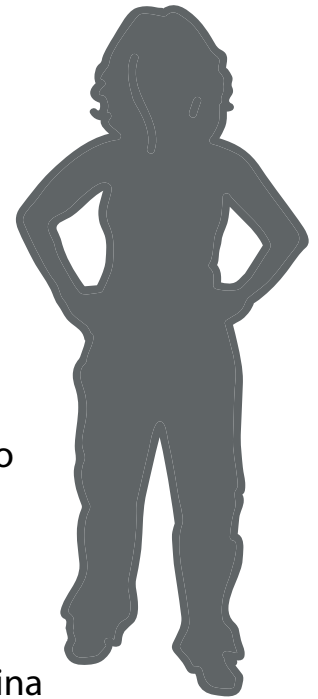

This year, we want to build on the momentum by recognizing new warriors and inspire even more to join the movement. "Vagina Warriors: The New Revolution" will highlight faces new and old with one thing in common – tireless and creative commitment to ending violence against women.

Recognizing and honoring Vagina Warriors is a part of the V-Day campaign to stop violence against women. V-Day is an organized campaign that includes the production of Eve Ensler's play, "The Vagina Monologues," and other key events to raise awareness and money to stop violence against women. From soccer moms to veteran activists, from lawmakers and law enforcers to young college students, Vagina Warriors around the world are leading the new revolution to end violence against women and change the world.

Celebrate the new revolution in your community. Honor Vagina Warriors. Make them visible. Support them. Be Inspired.
