INTRODUCTION

Volume Four of the University Handbook is a selection of policies, regulations, rules, practices and procedures of University departments and offices which are of particular interest to faculty, students and staff members.

When the 1969 edition of the Handbook was printed, there had been a great multiplication of the University's academic and administrative activities, and a corresponding increase in printed rules and procedures. Accordingly, at that time an Operations Manual was developed for material dealing essentially with administrative policies, regulations and procedures, and incorporating relevant items formerly in the Handbook or in other campus sources. More of this material has now been transferred to the Manual, with appropriate reference indication in the Handbook.

As new policies or regulations supersede the old, they will be published and distributed through the new system of reference stations (see Volume Two, Section 21-71) for inclusion in the Handbook or as Administrative Policy Statements, or as separate reference items. This revision procedure has been adopted with the hope that campus personnel will benefit from the availability of up-to-date, useful and usable information.

Under provisions of the Washington Higher Education Administrative Procedures Act of 1971 (RCW 28B.19), additional regulations have been adopted by the Board of Regents, which now constitute a part of the Washington Administrative Code. These regulations are designated under the category WAC 478 Rules of the University of Washington and are made available through the Reference Station System, together with those designated as WAC 251 Rules of the Higher Education Personnel Board, which are applicable to classified employees of the University.

Organization of Materials

Although the materials of Volume Four were not prepared as an integrated whole, the format follows basically that of Volume Two, with divisions into Parts, Chapters and Sections, but without the more sophisticated chapter and section numbering system of the other volume.

Source Terminology and Abbreviations

All information in this volume has been documented with as complete accuracy as has been possible, and has been approved for this edition by the issuing source where this could be established. Sources are normally given following sections or chapters, except where, for clarity, it has seemed desirable to insert them at applicable subsections. The following explanatory notes will be helpful; other entries will be self-explanatory.
