By Grant Jones, 5/17/2007 8:29:35 AM

In April, Tufts University in Boston held an "Islamic Awareness Week." As is well known the purpose of various "awareness" weeks and months is the indoctrination of "correct" thinking on the subject being singled out for this treatment.

It is highly unlikely that there are any students at Tufts not already aware of Islam's existence. The point of Tufts' awareness week is to provide faculty and administrators with an excuse to promote the Politically Correct version of the "Religion of Peace."

For proof one need look no further that Tufts' treatment of student dissenters to the university's Party Line. Needless to say the above factual statements are now Thoughtcrime on American university campuses. The Foundation for Individual Rights in Education has taken up the case of thought being banned at Tufts University. American universities like to promote the idea that they are bastions of free thought, inquiry and openness to opposing viewpoints. This, of course, is a lie. It is time for the American people to insist that the system of higher education live up to their propaganda.
